Thirty-Nine Girls Receive Diplomas Before Large Audience at the Odeon.

COMMENCEMENT.

Alumni Association of Washington University Branch Welcomes '03 Class at an Afternoon Luncheon.

Mary Institute held its fortieth commencement exercises yesterday morning at the Odeon, a class of thirty-nine young women finishing their course of study at this branch of Washington University.

The auditorium was, as usual, filled with a throng of relatives and friends, and the programme proved more than ordinarily interesting. At 10:30 o'clock the entire school, led by the smallest girls, marched on the palm-decorated stage and took their position on an elevated platform, the reniors ranged in front. All were gowned in white, and the center row carried large a ... bouquets of pallow roses, their class color and flower, thay streamers of yellow ribbons hanging in a graceful shower from the bouquets. Chancellor Chaplin of the University, Principal Edmund Sears of Mary Institute and the Board of Directors were scated at the left side of the stage. Yellow and black decorations prevailed, the class motto, "Naught Unworthy," hanging above the school in Greek letters of black on a yellow background. Mendelssohn's "In His Hands Are All the Corners of the Earth" was sung in chorus by the entire school, led by Miss Emma Taussig, followed by a prayer by the Reverend Doctor Williamson. Lenita Collins, class president, who is Lenita Collins, class president, who is graduated with highest honor, then delivered an address of welcome. Elizabeth Taylor Hull, the class essayist, read a paper on "Superstitions of the Twentieth Century," and Virginia Claiborne Adams gave the class history, under the title of "Blossoming of the Aloe." This was repiete, as is customary, with puns and witticisms on the names of the graduating class and pertinent references to their fads and fancies.

Several choruses by the school were interspersed before the address of the morning, which was delivered by the Reverend Doctor James R. Winchester of the Church of the Ascension.

PRIZES AND DIPLOMAS.

At its close Chancellor Chaplin presented the diplomas and Miss Sarah Tower, president of the Alumnae Association, gave a short address before handing the various alumnae prizes to those who were fortunate literature; to Josephine Turner, '63, for the Greek; to Lucile Blackwelder, '94, for excellence in essay writing, with honorable mentions to Eleanor Hall, '64, and Vera Russell,

'65. The cooking prizes, two chafing dishes, were presented by the chancellor to Charlotte Saylor and Helen Hays.

The class hymn, words by Clara Haddock

In the history of the school.

Luncheon was served in the large upper auditorium, the tables being attractively stranged with yellow and black decorations and the class emblems and mottoes much in evidence. An orchestra of stringed instruments played during the luncheon, which was served in several courses.

Then Miss Tower, president of the association, called for order, and a short programme was carried out. Miss Tower first toasted the class of 1903, just entering the association, the response being made by Miss Bessie Elliott. Miss Susan Creighton Williams gave a "Ballad of Graduation" and Mrs. James Waterworth responded to the sentiment, "The Mary of Long Ago," the alumnae quartet interposing several music selections.

Adjournment was then made to the recital hall, where an entertaining Italian play, given by members of the association, rounded off the afternoon in merry style. This play is usually a feature of the closing year at the Mary.
